[]
West Berlin: [M]ayor Brandt has recently expressed concern that if the USSR again blocks ground access to West Berlin, the Western Allies may turn to an airlift rather than resort to forceful measures to restore land routes. He and other top Berlin officials consider that an airlift is no longer an effective response and will not sustain the city's morale.]

[B]randt complains that contingency planning on Berlin access merely calls for Allied consultations at "almost every critical stage." He proposes instead that in order to "avoid wavering" [] 25X6 alternative courses of action should be spelled out in advance to permit rapid decision at a high political level.] 25X1

[]
Thailand: [T]he Thai cabinet is considering a trade treaty with the USSR as a first step toward reducing Thailand's reliance on US support.]

[T]he USSR sought such a treaty last year, but Thai leaders put the Soviets off. The Thais are reviving the subject at this time. [] 25X1

25X1
[] the subject is being reconsidered because Premier Sarit is dissatisfied with the state of US-Thai relations and with American policy in Southeast Asia. Sarit believes that as these relations stand, Thailand is unable to take independent political or military action.]

[C]urrent Thai-Soviet trade is negligible and is carried on without any formal agreement. [] 25X1
